Dear participant,

First we would like to express our gratitude for your enthusiastic participation in the first five of six steps of the participatory assessment of land management interventions in the San Simon valley – thank you! Second, we would like to invite you to a group meeting for the final step. Planning for the future of the valley requires evaluating what has been done in the past in a collaborative way to learn from the different knowledge, experiences and perspectives of people who care about this land.

This is the opportunity to see the results of the interviews, field data collected on evaluation criteria you identified and hear from other participants. We will then integrate our perspectives for your final evaluation of these interventions.

We are looking forward to seeing and working with you again. While you are a direct participant in the overall process, please feel free to invite relatives or friends that you think would be interested in experiencing the final step.

Thank you to those who have supported this research, including:
